The fourth episode shed light on Jereh's story of shale gas extraction with the help of high-end equipment Apollo turbine frac pumper. It features with big power, small size and long operating time. It can double the efficiency of shale gas extraction compared to regular equipment. And it is significant that its appearance makes China the third country that has turbine fracturing pumper after the United States and Russia.

"As President Xi Jinping proposed that in developing a modernized economy, we must focus on the real economy and give priority to improving the quality of the supply system. We will work faster to build China into a manufacturer of quality and develop advanced manufacturing. With this guideline, Jereh will continuously innovate to promote the reform of energy production and utilization methods and build a clean, low-carbon, safe and efficient energy system." said Simon Xie, vice president of Jereh Group.
